Summary Information

Repository: Center for the History of Medicine (Francis A. Countway Library of Medicine)

Creator: Cannon, Walter B. (Walter Bradford), 1871-1945.

Title: Walter Bradford Cannon papers

Identifier: H MS c40

Date: 1873-1945 (inclusive),

Date: Majority of material found within 1881-1945

Physical Description: 209 boxes

Overview: The Walter Bradford Cannon papers, 1873-1945 (inclusive), 1881-1945 (bulk) record Cannon's administrative, research, and professional activities while George Higginson Professor of Physiology and Chair of the Department at Harvard Medical School. The collection consists of correspondence, research data, manuscripts, lecture notes, and meeting minutes resulting from Cannon's administrative and committee work at Harvard Medical School, his professional activities on behalf of refugees and other humanitarian interests; and his involvement in scientific organizations. The collection also contains records produced during Cannon's wartime medical service, extensive personal correspondence with his wife, Cornelia Cannon; and several personal items including letters and papers from Cannon's student years.

Biographical Note

Walter Bradford Cannon was a major figure in the development of American physiology and medicine during the first four decades of the twentieth century. He left St. Paul, Minn., when he was almost twenty-one to matriculate as a freshman at Harvard College and remained at Harvard for the rest of his career, having received there the A.B. in 1896, the A.M. in 1897, the M.D. in 1900, and the honorary Sc.D. in 1937. As a student, Cannon held positions at Radcliffe and Harvard College as proctor and zoology instructor. He was appointed instructor in physiology at Harvard Medical School after graduation in 1900, and was promoted to assistant professor of physiology in 1902. In 1906, he succeeded Henry Pickering Bowditch as the second George Higginson Professor of Physiology and Chairman of the Department. In 1942, he retired and became professor emeritus.

Although his work over the years contributed substantially to the fields of radiology, gastroenterology, endocrinology, psychology and psychiatry, pharmacology, neurology, research surgery, and clinical medicine, Cannon was considered by himself and others first and foremost a physiologist. His scientific research followed a natural progression which began as a first-year medical student with studies on the digestive tract and led to further work on gastrointestinal motility, effects of emotional excitement on bodily functions, adrenal secretions and the formulation of his emergency theory. After interruption by World War I--at which time Cannon concentrated on the nature of wound shock and methods of treatment--denervated heart experiments led to work on the sympathetic nervous system which resulted in his concept of self-regulation of physiologic processes, or homeostasis. The denervated heart experiments also led to study of the chemical transmission of nerve impulses and the discovery of the two sympathins. Cannon's last years were devoted to study of the parasympathetic and somatic systems and to the central nervous system. Monographs on all these researches were published from time to time summarizing the continuous stream of technical papers from the Harvard Medical School Physiology Laboratory which were authored by Cannon and his co-workers.*

The papers in the Archive relate not only to Cannon the scientist, but also to Cannon the humanist who believed in the universality of knowledge and the international brotherhood of man. He wrote and spoke frequently on the subjects of medical education and of the implications and relations of science to society. He participated in the battle for the defense of medical research and animal experimentation against the antivivisectionists. He served in the Medical Corps of the U.S. Army in World War I and in an advisory capacity to the U.S. Government in World War II. He influenced the policies of a number of organizations, foundations and funds, scientific and otherwise, as an officer, committee chairman, adviser, or active member. He gave unselfishly of precious time and energy to provide medical aid to war-torn countries and relief for suffering refugees. All of the above attest to Cannon's profound belief in the highest democratic ideals, feeling as he did that a spirit of freedom and independence are vital to the success of creativity and scientific investigation.

Although he never received a Nobel Prize, Walter Cannon was awarded far more than a usual share of medals and honors. And although he participated in controversial issues, Cannon was held in the highest esteem by his colleagues and students. His value as a teacher may be judged by the large number of his students who went on to high positions in the world of science and medicine. He was blessed with a happy home life shared by his wife, Cornelia James Cannon, his sisters Ida and Bernice, and his five children. In spite of failing health, Cannon continued his research, teaching, and organizational duties after retirement. On October 1, 1945, just short of his seventy-fourth birthday, he succumbed to mycosis fungoides, from which he had suffered for almost fifteen years as a result of over-exposure to X-rays during his early experiments on digestion.

A complete bibliography of Cannon's prolific writings is available in The Life and Contributions of Walter Bradford Cannon, ed. by C.M. Brooks, K. Koizumi, and J.O. Pinkston (State University of New York, Downstate Medical Center, 1975, pp. 239-263). The bibliography also includes a list of obituaries and articles about Cannon on pp. 263-264, to which may be added a biographical sketch prepared for the Dictionary of Scientific Biography by A. Clifford Barger and Saul Benison (to be published).

Walter B. Cannon -- Chronology

- 1871: born on Oct 19 at Prairie du Chien, Wisconsin
- 1885: left school to work in railway office for two years
- 1891: graduated in three years from St. Paul High School
- 1892: entered freshman class of Harvard College
- 1896: graduated summa cum laude and awarded B.A. degree; entered Harvard Medical School
- 1897: recorded first observation by means of x-rays of movements of the stomach;
- 1897: awarded M.A. degree
- 1899-1900: taught course at Harvard and Radcliffe on comparative anatomy of vertebrates
- 1900: awarded M.D. degree (cum laude);
- 1900: appointed instructor in physiology at Harvard Medical School;
- 1900: publication of article on application of case method to teaching of medicine
- 1901: married on June 25 to Cornelia James
- 1902: appointed assistant professor in physiology at Harvard Medical School

- 1904: became member of American Association for the Advancement of Science
- 1906: offered positions at Cornell University Medical School and Mayo Clinic;
- 1906: succeeded H.P. Bowditch as George Higginson Professor of Physiology at Harvard Medical School;
- 1906: elected fellow of American Academy of Arts and Sciences
- 1908: became chairman of Section on Physiology and Pathology of American Medical Association;
- 1908: became chairman of Committee for the Protection of Medical Research;
- 1908: declined deanship at Harvard Medical School
- 1910: publication of A Laboratory Course in Physiology
- 1911: publication of The Mechanical Factors of Digestion
- 1913: declined deanship at University of Minnesota Medical School
- 1914: elected to National Academy of Sciences
- 1914-1916: served as President of American Physiological Society
- 1915: publication of Bodily Changes in Pain, Hunger, Fear and Rage;
- 1915: appointed trustee of Elizabeth Thompson Science Fund
- 1916: declined deanship at Harvard Medical School
- 1917-1918: served with AEF in England and France during World War I;
- 1917-1918: American President of Anglo-American Medical Society;
- 1917-1918: member of Special Investigation Committee on Surgical Shock and Allied Problems of English Medical Research Committee;
- 1917-1918: chairman of Medical Research Committee of American Red Cross
- 1918: delivered Croonian lecture to Royal Society, London
- 1919: created Commander of the Order of the Bath
- 1920: declined offer of position as research physiologist at Mayo Clinic
- 1921: joined Committee for Research on Sex Problems of National Research Council
- 1922: awarded DSM as director of physiological research for AEF in France
- 1923: publication of Traumatic Shock;
- 1923: awarded honorary degree by Yale University;
- 1923: first meeting with I.P. Pavlov who visited U.S.
- 1927: joined Medical Fellowship Board of National Research Council
- 1929: awarded honorary degree by Boston University;
- 1929: in charge of arrangements for 13th International Congress of Physiologists held in Boston
- 1930: served as exchange professor in France for second half of 1929-1930 academic year;
- 1930: visited Spain;
- 1930: awarded honorary degrees by Universities of Liege and Strasbourg;
- 1930: elected foreign honorary fellow of Royal Society of Edinburgh;
- 1930: delivered Linacre lecture at Cambridge, England;
- 1930: awarded $175,000 grant from Rockefeller Foundation for research in physiology
- 1931: celebration of 25th anniversary as Higginson Professor of Physiology;
- 1931: awarded honorary degree by University of Paris;
- 1931: awarded Baly Medal by Royal College of Physicians;
- 1931: beginning of skin trouble later diagnosed as mycosis fungoides
- 1932: publication of The Wisdom of the Body
- 1933: delivered lectures for Beaumont Centennial celebration
- 1934: awarded Gold Medal by National Institute of Social Sciences;
- 1934: elected to honorary membership in Physiological Society (England);
- 1934: delivered Kober lectures to Association of American Physicians;
- 1934: delivered Caldwell lecture to American Roentgen Ray Society

- 1935: visiting professor at Peking Union Medical College, China;
- 1935: attended 15th International Congress of Physiologists in Russia
- 1936: appointed to Board of Scientific Directors of Rockefeller Institute;
- 1936: became chairman of Committee on Endocrinology of National Research Council;
- 1936: elected corresponding member, National Academy of Medicine, Argentina;
- 1936: elected honorary foreign member, Royal Belgian Academy of Medicine;
- 1936: elected honorary member of New York Academy of Medicine;
- 1936: awarded honorary degree by Washington University School of Medicine;
- 1936: delivered address to American College of Physicians in Detroit;
- 1936: delivered address at 100th anniversary of Emory University, Atlanta;
- 1936: publication of Digestion and Health
- 1937: publication of Autonomic Neuro-Effector Systems (with Arturo Rosenblueth);
- 1937: awarded honorary degree by Harvard University;
- 1937: became chairman of Spanish Medical Bureau
- 1939: served as President of American Association for the Advancement of Science;
- 1939: elected to foreign membership of Royal Society, London;
- 1939: elected honorary foreign member of Royal Swedish Academy of Science;
- 1939: became member of China Medical Board;
- 1939: delivered Hughlings Jackson memorial lecture at Toronto;
- 1939: attended 50th anniversary of University of Minnesota Medical School
- 1940: became chairman of Committee on Shock and Transfusion of National Research Council;
- 1940: delivered address at 50th anniversary of Stanford University
- 1941: chairman of Medical Division, United China Relief;
- 1941: awarded Friedenwald Medal by American Gastroenterological Association;
- 1941: Hitchcock visiting professor at University of California
- 1942: became foreign secretary of National Academy of Science and chairman of Foreign Relations Division of National Research Council;
- 1942: retired and became professor emeritus at Harvard Medical School;
- 1942: elected honorary member of Academy of Sciences of USSR
- 1943: President of American-Soviet Medical Society
- 1944: visiting professor at New York University Medical School
- 1945: visiting investigator at Institute of Cardiology, Mexico City;
- 1945: publication of The Way of an Investigator;
- 1945: awarded honorary degree by New York University;
- 1945: died on Oct 1 at Franklin, New Hampshire
- 1949: posthumous publication of The Super-Sensitivity of Denervated Structures (completed by Arturo Rosenblueth)

Scope And Content Note

The Walter B. Cannon Archive in the Countway Library of Harvard Medical School constitutes the major repository of his papers. The nucleus has been drawn from the Harvard Medical Archives and supplemented since the establishment of the Walter B. Cannon Research Project in 1973 by additional materials and photoreproductions from the Cannon family, from colleagues and former students, and from collections in other libraries. The letters and related materials are contained in 164 manuscript boxes. Particularly full runs of correspondence in all the categories described in this inventory are to be found from mid-1922 to mid-1924 and from mid-1930 to 1942. The diaries, scrapbooks and albums, manuscripts and lecture notes, and memorabilia take up another 16 boxes. Addenda and supplementary materials gathered together by project investigators for use in preparation of a full-length biography account for an additional 29 boxes as of the end of 1977.
